KEW'S MILLENNIUM SEED BANK SAVING THE FUTURE

Talk By

Dr ELINOR BREMAN

'Senior Research Leader, Seed Conservation at Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew'.

We are delighted to welcome Dr Elinor Breman, who is based at Kew's wild botanic garden, Wakehurst, in West Sussex. Dr Elinor Breman has been working for Kew's Millennium Seed Bank since 2013 and now manages this global plant conservation programme. She will talk about the role of seed banks in conservation – how they operate and why we need them – as well as the global partnership that underpins the work of the Millennium Seed Bank, providing insights to several current projects.

You will have a virtual tour of the seed bank and follow every stage of the process from planning collections through to banking and using the seeds that are stored.
